Smiles and Realities

THE OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE a gain, of course, but a very minor from the Vienna talks between Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Khrushchev is terse, and additional information has not been forthcoming. The general impression given by the con-ference is favorable—the partici-pants smiled, shook hands and appeared to hit it off well on a personal basis. On all superficial counts this was a "good" meeting. But below the surface the evidence gives less reason for optimism.

When Mr. Khrushchev met Mr. Eisenhower at Camp David the same general atmosphere of friendliness prevailed as has just been witnessed at Vienna. This was true of the earlier Eisenhower-Khrushchev meeting in Geneva. But subsequent events have shown that friendly atmosphere did not mean much when it came to practical politics. The years since those meetings have been marked by the most determined and aggressive efforts of world Communism to extend its power.

What, then, do the Vienna meet-ings mean? Obviously their significance goes much deeper than the banquets and toasts and smiles. The only concrete fact which seems to emerge from the talks is that Mr. Khrushchev agrees there should be an effective cease-fire in Laos. This is not new policy—it had already been agreed on but it had not been made effective. Now there is hope that it will be—that the continuing Communist attacks will cease and negotiation of a settlement can

"To take the most notable evidence of this far-reaching intrigue, the Cana dian and British governments are en gaged in a counterfeit economic quarrel that would be comic if it were not so mischievous. When Canada deliberately damages the economy of Britain, essential customer, by various tariff taxation and subsidy arrangements, and when the British government reacts with a simulated show of anger, we must assume that a devious strategem is under way.

"I need hardly observe that no two allied governments and friendly trading partners could possibly act in this fashion and that their public con-flict must disguise some monstrous machinations undoubtedly calculated to enrich the transatlantic economy while ostensibly impoverishing it.

compound this deliberate confusion, the ablest of the official agents, a man named Hees, is going about the country, with well-feigned innocence, to explain that the govern-ment is opposed to protectionism and is merely keeping out foreign goods for the purpose of expanding trade. In such men we must recognize enemies of genius. Clearly we must confront in Ottawa and London a masterpiece of skilled duplicity.

"Or again, I must warn the Russian government not to be misled by the national budget of Canada. The continual deficits and rising debts proudly reported by the minister of finance are so incredible that they must cover mas-sive surpluses and vast secret reserves or otherwise the government would re-sign in humiliation and despair after it had promised just the opposite.

By the same device the figures on un employment are grossly exag-gerated by the government for its own mysterious purposes. It is preposterous to believe that a nation so naturally rich as Canada should be as economically stagnant as the government asserts. Yet these figures are generally believed.

'After witnessing the political system in operation I repeat that even in a revolutionary situation the collapse of Canada should not be immediately assumed. It is to be noted that he "can see out only through a pair of peep holes." The object of this experiment appears to be the development of two distinct personalities in a monkey with a double brain. We are furthermore told that this brain splitting would not help humans, owing to the usual fact that the human body differs from that of the animal; so we may well wonder just why this devilish operation is performed at all. God is not mocked. "Vengeance is Mine, saith the Lord. I will repay. ELIZABETH SMITH.

For the most part, we Stott used the same old spikes, being frugal in such matters.

Basically, the materials are the same as they have been for years, though poles have been renewed as well as the carpeting on the board when occasion demanded.

But there is a difference.

In the brighter days of what is becoming a distant past, we tried to put the board as high from the water as we could and still keep the structure stable. Last week end, we were content to leave it a scant one meter from the surface. Our rationalization was simple enough.

When you drive old piles with a heavy sledge, the tops rough out. It was neces-sary to cut off the "nigger-heads" where a heavy hammer broke the end grain.

And in the process of driving, a revelation came to an aged ex-diver. Sledge-hammers, like old athletes, gain weight over the years. Where a young diver once swung the lighter sledge of a decade ago, bringing it down with gusty grunts, the older boy last weekend dropped it with wheezing puffs more gently on the ancient piles.

Although the height has been cut down to half its original elevation, the old-timer who struggled onto the board found it amaz-

Somehow, in the intervening years, this desire for height has yielded to acceptance of the geometric definition of a straight line. A dive has become, for a creaking practitioner, the shortest distance between vo points-the end of the board and the water

What, I wonder, has happened to youth's irrepressible impulse to soar, to ride high, wide and handsome in the air? Sufficient now the quick slip to a short dip.

The no-longer young ex-diver takes his stance on the board. He glances down, as he did years ago, to see that his feet are properly placed for a take-off. He is dis-mayed to find that a slipping chest has created a small hemisphere obscuring his view of his feet.

He swings his arms part way up and learns, with alarm, that his shoulder joints haven't been oiled recently. The same re-sponse comes from his knees when he attempts his spring-and he admits sadly that

LOOKS AT SPORTS

The big man sprawled across the hotel bed. He looked remarkably natty even in casual clothes. He also looked annoyed in that poised sort of way Britishers look annoyed.

"This disturbs me," he said. He waved a newspaper clipping which read: "Birmingham, Third Lanark play to 1-1 draw; Fans Impressed But Not

The story dealt with the exhibition soccer match of the touring teams at Vancouver's Empire Stadium Saturday night. It stressed that this was the new trend in soccerkeep the ball on the move and avoid unnecessary body con

"We came to play soccer," Gil Merrick said. "We didn't come to rough house."

Soccer, with or without muscle, is something Merrick knows extremely well. A former member of the Birming-ham team he now manages, Merrick won 23 caps for Eng-land against the best in fitba' business.

He's built along the lines of a healthy Douglas fir. Across his top lip stretches a moustache, trimmed so that it will never give him trouble when he's eating soup.

Are his boys fit and ready for their exhibition match against Victoria All-Stars at Royal Athletic Park Wednesday at 8 p.m.?

"Fit as they can be allowing for the wonderful Canadian hospitality we've received." he smiled. "No, that's not quite right," he added. "Brian Farmer, one of my backs, stubbed a toe swimming Sunday. Looks nasty. But he may play."

Workingman Enjoys Soccer for 35c

The conversation returned to rough-house soccer. Per-is, it was suggested. Vancouver fans were looking for naps, it was suggested. Vancouver fans were looking for something like the full-blooded enthusiasm shown by other touring teams. West Bromwich and Tottenham for instance.

"I would be surprised if they played rough," he said. "They never played that way against us. Mind you, if there is a loose ball, my boys will go for it with all they have. But that's football. Aggressive but not rough."

What about Old Country soccer? Is England about ready to take its place with such fine teams as Real Madrid and Barcelona?

and Barcelona?

and Barcelona?

"Very definitely," he said, wincing slightly at the thought that Britain has taken a rear pew in recent years in the world soccer market.

"Tottenham had a fine side last year. I would hesitate to pick a winner between them (the British always refer to a team as "them") and Real Madrid.

"Britain actually got behind other countries largely because of the incentive factor.

"In Britain there was dissension between management the players. Other countries charged more at the gate, paid their players more Soccer in England is the workingman's game and the admission price was kept low. How low? About 35 cents in your money. Players' wages were fixed. The maximum a player earned was $52 a week. There was no such thing as contract negotiation. You took the contract offered.

"Now that's all changed. There is no maximum. I ers can negotiate their own contracts. If they do well there's no saying how much they can earn.

$177,000 Worth of New Talent Helps

His own Birmingham team, he said, is prepared to go along with the proposition that in time (and with bigger gate receipts) soccer will mean more financially to them did to Merrick.

That's the way it should be," he said. "In all the years I played my salary was fixed. I supplemented my income by articles for newspapers, radio appearances and the like. Even wrote a book on soccer. But my earnings were limited. Now that the incentive barrier has been taken away there will be more dedication. It will show on the field."

To improve his side, Merrick moved quickly last year, his first as manager. He bought four players Singer from Newport, $13,000; Jim Bloomfield from New Arsened, $78,000; Jimme Marcis from Everton, $47,000, and nomfield from New William P. McColl, lord of a manor at 1231 Judge Place, reached into his billfold. No fancy shuffler, it nonetheless took him only a second to pick out the card he wanted.

It was a plain but neat business card:
"Robert S. Osgood," it read. "Lumber and veneer.
DUnkirk 2-8278. 3315 West Fifth Street, Los Angeles 5."
That's the fellow, along with Laurie Carroll, who

"And that's how," he said, flipping the card over, Scrawled on the back: "Stay level."

That's all there was on the card. But, next to money most important piece of paraphernalia in the McColl wallet.

Shank is a nasty word. But McColl said it first, and he may be allowed to get away with it. He's the same chap who just recently discarded one of the city's most famous cases of shanks.

Shanking no longer worries him, and he says it surely and confidently. "On the odd occasion, I might shank one but I'm willing to bet that I'll never do it twice in one round. I know what to do about it now.

"But, I ask you, wasn't that a dizzy way to get rid of "Boo (Osgood), Laurie and I were having coffee in the lounge during the Empress tournament. Both were trying to tell me what I was doing wrong, but it was those two words (stay level) that did it."

words (stay level) that does that mean?

"They told me to keep my head right above the ball.

Don't do this ... McColl rocked his head slightly, as if not ding a polite yes. "Or this ... and he then shook his head from side to side, as if quietly instructing a child not to stand on the new during a church service.

eight from. Then you gradually increase the swing.

"'Do that for 10 minutes every day,' Carroll told me, 'and you'll never be bothered by the shanks'."

But for 10 months, McColl was more than bothered. He suffered to the depths of despair. The popular insurance man, who in 1955 won every major tournament on Van-couver Island except the City Amateur, was willing to de-clare a national soliday every time he managed to break 80.

That's how oad it was.

And for 10 months he listened to any and every suggestion. Duffers that normally couldn't qualify as McColl's caddy imparted their secrets.

But for the most part the advice of the experts and duffers failed to ease the pain that accompanies one of golf's most common faults. Then along came Carroll and Osgood, the latter being one who can easily sympathize because he suffered similar agonies for more than a year.

Generally, a shank results when the ball is hit at the curve of an iron where the blade meets the shaft (the hosel). The ball veers to the right, completely out of Now that I look back at it, a lot of the fellows who tried to help me were basically getting the same thing.

But none could get it out as simply as Osgood did."

How did it all happen, and where?

McColl remembers very well: "At the Cowichan Open, July 1. I shanked 11 irons that day.

"I left for England the very next day and, needless to say, I never took any clubs with me."

And with the Cowichan Open coming up again, that poses an interesting question. Will Bill play up there

A 5-Handicapper Shoots at 66!

'You darn right I will!" Confidence cotwithstanding, the Cowichan Open has always been a very good tournament for McColl. He twice won it all, and finished second on two other occasions.

McColl's return to fairway health started shortly after the Empress lournament. "I knew I had the shanks beaten at the first Inter-Club League matches. I took a 70 (one over par) even though I had one unplayable lie." And if McColl only suspected it then, his complete re-covery was confirmed a few weeks ago during a team match with Seattle. Teamed with Dr. George Bigelow, Mc-Coll shot a three-under-par 66 to help the Oak Bay pairing defeat Seattle's highly-regarded Harry Given and Erv McColl's handicap then was five. The strokes, right-fully his, weren't needed but it left the Seattle pair wonder-

"What in the Sam Hill," Given demanded, "do your scratch players do up here . . . shoot 58s?"

Shank is stil a nasty word to many, but today it no longer holds any terror for McColl, whose rounds of 70 and 67 Sunday put him four strokes in front of the field and in sition to win his second City Amateur title

"I'll tell you though," he concluded, "I wouldn't wish the shanks on my worst enemy. If anybody tells me he's bothered by them. I'll cry for him."

The Hook Hooking is far less preva lent among average golfers than slicing, but it can be equally disastrous.

The most common cause is having the left hand too far over to the right. This tends to make the wrists roll on the

B.C. GOVERNMENT BUYS FOUR 'BARGAIN' PLANES

Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi, who has been often criticized for his use of government aircraft on flying trips around the province, has added four more planes to the government fleet. Mr. Gaglardi says that he bought four twin-engined Beechcraft Expeditors for "a ridiculously low price, only the real cost of two engines." Aviation engineers calcu-lated that two new engines for the model would cost about $20,000. The planes sell new for $150,000 to $200,000 apiece.

Two of the aircraft will be converted for aerial photography work by the department of lands and forests. Mr. Gaglardi said that they were purchased jointly by the highways and lands departments and may be used by either department.

The highways department already owns Widgeon and an Anson, both of which are frequently used by Mr. Gaglardi.
"Our Anson is becoming obsolete," Mr. Gaglardi said.

The Beechcraft is described as having accommodation for seven passengers, soundproofing, controlled ventilation and heating.

Asked where he heard of the deal, the minister said, "It was offered to me . . to the government." He didn't elaborate

THROW AWAY MY RECIPES?"

"Not on your life! I like the idea of not having to sift flour, but what about all my special recipes!" Hold on Ma'am! You don't have to throw away all your favourite recipes. With Ogilvie Flour you can sift or not sift, just as you choose. When you want to save time, you'll still get perfect results when you use the Ogilvie no-sift baking method. Instead of sifting when your recipe calls for it, simply remove two level tablespoons of flour from each cup. Stir in other dry ingredients thoroughly. If you wish to continue to sift for your special recipes, by all means continue to do so. You'll get finest baking results, either way with Ogilvie Pre-Sifted Flour.

what goes on around them. Our homes will be affected by what happens on the next lot but they may also feel the repercussions of actions taken two blocks away or directly attributed to the street and neighborhood in which it stands. If, for example, the oak trees in the bouleyard are cut down or a gas station locates on the corner lot, your home will be affected. In the same way, if a new road is put in four miles from your home and this cuts commuting time to downtown by five minutes you will not only enjoy improved convenience but the value of your home will tend to increase. To a varying extent, therefore, what goes on in the whole region affects you and Excluding sleeping hours, the average person spends 40 per cent of his time away from home and the average bread-winner of the family will spend at least half his time away from home. This big slice of our lives is largely spent in some other part of the city, working in a dockyard, shopping in stores, attending school, visiting friends, or just driving an auto from one place to another

If so much time is spent in the city and its region, it is obvious that the environment for better living embraces the whole region as well as the home.

Most people feel little responsibility for the ferm of the city and the region in which they live. It is too vast and too impersonal. We are more concerned with the state of the back lawn than the amount of public park, and if we install double plumbing it does not necessarily show an interest in a trunk sewerage scheme.

Public apathy might be less if it were more widely known that the individual can influence his surroundings by the democratic processes of working through the Advisory Planning Commissions and the Municipal Councils. Councils, with the advice of the Planning Commissions, are responsible for zoning which controls the use made of all land. They are also responsible for many new roads, parks and other civic improvements.

Advantages Are Many In 'City of Gardens'

You've Got to Look Over the Fence

Victoria calls itself (on occasion) the "City of Gardens," and this title isn't far wrong as far as visiting realtors are con-

L. M. Corke, president of the Victoria Real Estate Board, has noticed that real estate men from across Canada are singu-larly impressed by Victoria's beautiful surroundings, well-kept gardens, and fine homes.

Realtors look for such things, and are impressed when they see them. And, in the case of Victoria, they are very much taken by the low cost of all this finery. We who live in Victoria don't realize just how lucky we are in this regard. A former president of the Canadian Association of Real Estate Boards has estimated that homes here are, on the average, homes in other cities across Canada.

Victorians get the increased advantages of better living conditions generally, with a fine climate, fine parks, many outdoor areas and scenic highways.

The majority of homes in Victoria are priced in the $11,000 to $16,000 bracket, and, according to Mr. Corke, are sold under the multiple listing scheme.

There are $00 according to parket resture recis. There are 60 accredited realtors registered with the multiple listing service in Victoria. These 60 firms have banded together to give vendors and purchasers all the benefits of co-operative selling. And, as Mrs. Catharine Godfrey, man-to such difficulties as sprawl in rural areas, major road networks, and the renewal of the older parts of the re-

Home improvement, from rugs in the rumpus room to pols on the patio, is the subject of a constant stream of articles, announcements and advertisements in magazines, newspapers, radio and television. In comparison, the case for an improved road system or a more attractive downtown is rarely heard. If our over-all urban environment is to be worthy of our homes and gardens much more effort will have to be made in explaining to more people that town planning pays—aesthetically, so-cially and financially. Only when planning is strongly supported and promoted will the prospect of better living include our whole urban and rural environment.

Victoria and the remainder of the Capital Region is now a relatively efficient and attractive area. Compared to many large North American cities, it is indeed fortunate in having retained much of its natural setting. Urban expansions, including the greatly increased usage of ager of the service, points out, results have proven the worth of this type of merchandising.

MRS. CATHERINE GOLFREY ... good results.

Leave The Selling To Expert

The home probably repre sents the biggest investment that anyone ever makes. And when the time comes to sell that home, common sense de mands that it is done rightto make sure the investment has been a good one.

There are those who feel that they can do a good job of selling their own home, and many try, but few succeed.

Everyone has heard of people who have sold their own homes, but few have heard of the people who have tried and

There's no doubt about it; if you succeed in selling your own home, it represents a sub-stantial saving but before attempting it, it is necessary to ask yourself whether it is worth it to let an amateur manage a transaction that in sands of dollars

SPECIALIST

This is an age of specializa tion and when a job is to be done well, it demands a spe-cialist. And a transaction this big certainly rates a special-ist's attention.

But some homeowners think that they'll be crafty about selling their home, first at-tempting to sell it themselves then listing it with a real if they fail. Experience has shown, however, that they are only fooling themselves. There is no denying that on occasion this has been successful—but experience has shown that the best prospects usually turn up within 30 days. If a specialist is not there to show them around and answer their questions in a professio manner, they may not buy.

Gardens Can Give Pleasure All Year

A garden can be a tremendous asset to a home, but a large number of people utilize it to the fullest for only a small portion of the year.

They fail to realize that, if properly handled, a garden can be a showplace of blooms for most of the year,"

Most people will have their riot of color in the spring-tulips and daffodils and narcissi—but by the time July and August roll around, the garden is a brown, drab thing. Even the grass is dead-lookng.

But it need not be so, and the experts have offered a few tips that will keep the garden a place of beauty from early spring well into the fall.

Rotation

The secret is a sort of rotation system of planting.

That, and water. Some outlying areas find water in short supply in the summer, but in Victoria it is possible to get enough water to keep the garden growing. And, as long as it is growing, it can be a show-

The gardeners who know which flowers to use will have their first blooms in late January (that's right—Janu-ary) and their garden, with any luck, may continue bloom-ing right up past Christmas. Most, however, will stop blooming some time in Octo-ber or November.

'Cold' Blooms

It depends on the weather. naturally, but most years will find species of crocus and snowdrops in bloom before February.

Within a few weeks the mass of spring flowers are in bloom. This is the period in which any garden looks good; even an open field will be a mass of blooms with wild flowers and even weeds like dandelions producing a show. But while the daffodils and are spectacular, they are relatively short-lived. They are gone by May, sometimes sooner, and with them the garden seems to die. Many gardens in Victoria remain dormant after this period of spring color — but others come back to life in late May and early June as the summer annuals and per-renials come into their own.

Good Stopgap

Prior to this, of course, there is not a complete gap; plants like the iris provide a good stopgap between the spring and summer blooms. Summer plants seem, in general, to be marked by their blooming periods. nuals like petunia and nasturtium will keep on blooming, once they start, with new blooms appearing as the old ones die. Perrenials include such plants as the pinks and core-opsis. Other summer-flowering plants such as gladiolus and dahlia also have an important place in making a summer garden worth look-

Background

Experts also recommend the use of broad-leaved evergreen shrubs, such as rhododenron, azalia and Portugal laurel, to provide a green background for the flowers. These summer plants will bloom pretty well up to the first frost, by which time various fall plants are in full flower. Chrysanthemum, michaelmas daisy and pampas grass provide a fine show in Sep-tember. October, and even

And then, of course, there are plants like the roses, which bloom through the summer and may keep on right through December, in some cases, before the frost finally stunts them.

Broom Sweeps Many Areas With Beauty

Broom is a curse to many, but the yellow-flowering plant was never more beautiful in the Victoria area than it has been this last week.

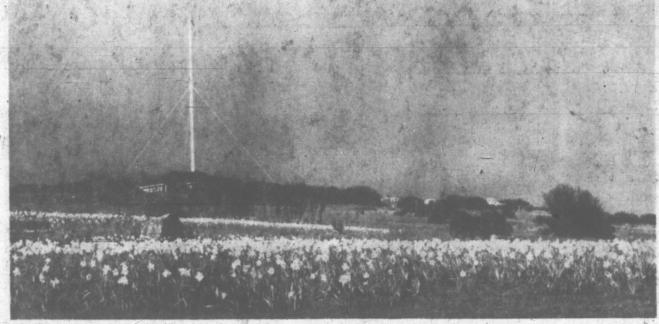

The unmistkable ochre blos-soms, some tinged with red brought on by the warmth following the heavy rainfall, are vivid and profuse.

They may be seen to best advantage on the roads in the vicinity of Sooke, where the shrub flourishes in the logging slash areas.

There is also a fine patch on the sloping hill opposite Gordon's Beach. Broom has been cursed by hayfever sufferers from time Immemorial, but it still is like. nothing else in swathing a field or hillside in solid yellow,

IN THE SPRING even an open field can become a thing of beauty—especially if one has taken the trouble to plant thousands of daffodil bulbs, as was done at Beacon Hill Park. This fine display is typical of the way most gardens look in the spring — but how about later in the year? At Beacon Hill the flowers bloom almost all year round, because of a system of "rotation" planting.

THE SWANS HELP the symmetry of the picture, have these beautiful Beacon Hill Park birds in their own yard. Local gardeners can however, have beautiful pools, overhung with ferns and creeping plants, to set off their dis-Hill Park shows the way to achieve a tranquil and beautiful atomsphere with a combination of pool and flowering trees.

as far as your garden.

Nearly every flower that is popular with Victoria gardeners has been produced, or improved, by geneticists. Take the tulip, for example.

No one knows what it started as originally, but there are now so many varieties that they are scarcely recognizable as belonging to the same stock.

There are dwarf and long-stem tulips; early blooming and late-blooming types; single and multiple-petalled varieties, not to mention the great variation in colors that have been developed.

varieties, not to mention the great variation in colors that have been developed.

The multiple-bloom varieties are among the most interesting. Instead of the single petal common to most fullips, the petals of this type are double or triple or more, so that some tulips almost look like a rose.

The ragged-edge petals, too, have been developed by carreful selective breeding by trained scientists.

You a Hound for Sound?

PERFECT FIDELITY IS EASY NOW

No longer do you have to be an electronics fanalic to appreciate hi-fi; they're giving perfect sound back to the ordinary people now. The evidence is everywhere

Before, if you wanted a hi-fi, you had to buy a separate amplifier, pre-amplifier and tuner, and most likely you had to string them all together yourself. That is, if you knew what they were.

There were loudspeakers for this and speakers for that, in all shapes and sizes, and generally it was assumed that you would put aside one wall (say in the living room) for the assembly of the thing.

SPEAKERS EVERYWHERE

Those who weren't happy with speakers hanging from the walls and ceiling of the living room (some said they weren't attractive . . . cluttered the place up) pretty well had to do without. Besides, it was assumed that if one wasn't willing to put up with a little unsightliness, one didn't care enough about perfect fidelity to rate a hi-fi setup anyway.

(Perfect fidelity-to the uninitiated, that means virtually perfect reproduction of sound . . . like you were sitting in the front row listening to the New York Phil monic, practically on Leonard Bernstein's coat tails.)

And then there was the little matter of tone arms, and carriages, and needles, and dozens of other little electronic doodads that required an expert's careful care. But that was long ago in the history of hi-fi—like four years ago, for instance. The strides that have been made since then must be rated as truly amazing.

HAPPILY HIDDEN

Now your amplifier, pre-amplifier and tuner come in a single compact chassis; your loudspeakers, if they are not fitted into the main cabinet, are hidden in bookshelves and other useful pieces of furniture; and you can buy an integrated tone arm and cartridge with the precision balance of a fine watch, or a tone arm alone that plugs into an amplifier without any soldering. It all came about because more and more people are demanding the beauty of high fidelity sound without the former fuss and bother. As Howard T. Harwood, public relations director for an Illinois firm, stated, "The industry has passed through the era of technique and is now in the era of enjoyment.

There are still plenty of advances being made, but hi-fi is now at the point where most people can enjoy it.

And, now, this includes wives,

EARDRUMS LOOK OUT

Everyone has seen the house with the cluttered little basement room in which hubby listens to his hi-fi. You enter it at risk of your eardrums, sometimes.

Generally, the room is in existence because hubby got in on hi-fi at the start and, when he toted his mass of electronic equipment into the living room, his wife immediately relegated it to the basement with a firm,

"Take that junk out of here!"
But that was long ago, as we said—maybe four or five years ago.

Now hi-fi sets have grown up in styling. Speakers can be located unobtrustively, or a complete hi-fi setup can be located in a single piece of furniture no bigger than an old-time radio cabinet.

No longer do you go downstairs to listen to hi-fi; it's strictly a living-room proposition now electronics equip ment has become compact and streamlined, women have been able to satisfy their love for good music and many have come to depend upon hi-fi in much the same way that some wives of a former generation used to depend upon the radio.

For one thing it pro vides a housewife psychologically - satisfying background music for her daily chores, and helps set her up in the right mood Wives with hi-fi sets

In a look at tomorrow, Western Construction and Building magazine predicted that technological advances already made in other fields will be applied to housing construction and furniture manufacture.

New materials and new ways of using them will result in better products at lower cost. They will change the homes we live in and the kind of furniture in those

Materials Battle

A battle of materials is already shaping up among light metals, steel, ceramics, plas-tics and the like as leaders of each industry eye the market of the future. Such materials, coupled with technological adantages, will bring about the breakthrough.

In the past the basic strengths and weaknesses of wood and brick have limited the design of houses. But with plastic, future homebuilders will be faced with far less limiting factors, it ap-

Used today for insulation and surface finishes, plastics will be used tomorrow for structural members as well.

Plastic Panels

The pre-fabricated "plastic sandwich" panel — an insulation sandwich of plastic foam between finished exterior surfaces — is likely to become the basic building unit. the modular system of con-struction (the so-called "skytechnique) walls and roofs of these panels can be erected in one-third the time required for conventional construction, and at a fraction of the cost.

Costs can be cut still further by incorporating window and door frames in these panels.

Many economies and con veniences are possible with this plastic-panel construction. Electro · luminescent lighting, for example, will be an attrac-tive feature.

In electro-luminescent lighting the panels will carry their own internal electric circuits and a soft, diffused light will be spread throughout the room from the interior sur-faces of the panels.

Re-arranging the color schemes of such rooms will be vastly simplified — just the lighting surface need be switched to change from one color scheme to another. Messy paint brushes will be-

Temperature control in these plastic panel houses will be simplified as well. Package Units

Kitchens and bathrooms will, in the future, come as package units that will be in-serted, complete, into the house. The bathroom especi-ally lends itself to package treatment for lower-cost production, in some cases just half the present price.

This saving should lead to a reduction of about 10 per cent in the cost of the house as a whole, which will in turn bring quality housing within reach of millions of more families, thereby substantially broadening the home construction market.

Tomorrow's bathroom, de-livered as a complete unit, will include such conveniences built-in towel warmers, towel cabinets, sunlamps scales, shower doors, and even the home laundry equipment. Since 90 per cent of the family wash originates in bedrooms and baths, locating the automatic washer or dryer units in close proximity will save thousands of needless steps.

More Mobile

The larger kitchen appli-ances will become more mobile, and will be treated more like present-day furni-ture. Stoves and dishwashers will unplug and come running -ready for use wherever they are wanted.

Electronic ranges, new re fuse-disposal methods and oxy-catalysts will make it pos-

Conveniences

The small kitchen area in tomorrow's home will be crammed tight with conveniences - built-in floor-to-ceiling cabinets and refrigerator units with elevator shelves. Another convenience would be a built in recipe selector that electronically projects onto the kitchen wall a full-color pic-ture of the desired dish, together with a list of ingredi-ents and complete preparation instructions.

These conveniences are not cheap at present, because they are rare — but future mass-production will bring down costs considerably.

WHAT IS FOREST SIDING?

WHAT ARE ITS QUALITIES? "FOREST" Siding, with its substantial thickness and greater wood volume, adds to the structural strength and solidity of the building.

Made of dry 1½-inch stock, 10 and 12-inch widths, "FOREST" Siding is a new type of Siding obtained from specially selected Cedar logs sawn to show the beauty and character of knots, burls, etc.

The design of "FOREST" Siding ensures a tight weather seal of the lap which, together with its thickness and flush-to-base principle, makes excellent material from the insulation standpoint.

"FOREST" Siding represents an economy to home-builders. Costing less than most other types of Siding, the lap design ensures easy fitting and speed applica-tion at less labor cost.

Wall of Air Is the Key To Insulation

Did you know that your home is protected by a wall of still air?

This wall of still air is the insulating force that protects your home, and you, from extremes of heat in all seasons.

There are many types of insulation, but the basic principle is much the same—to trap pockets of air to serve as a uffer between the interior of the home and the weather

If the air is able to circulate with that inside or outside the home it would not have the same buffer action. The fact that it is the air-rather than the material that encases it—that is important is indicated by the fact that the new hollow cement blocks pro-vide excellent insulation, while bricks which are not hollow provide notoriously poor pro-tection unless coupled with some other insulating device.
